Opening: "Jorinde Voigt: Considerations in the Now" at David Nolan Gallery

A German artist who works primarily in the medium of drawing, Jorinde Voigt returns for her third solo show at the gallery with a series of recent mixed media works on paper paired with collage pieces from 2012. Investigating both natural and psychological phenomena, Ms. Voigt's narrative works express her personal experience of the world. In the medium-scale drawings on view, the artist uses ink, gold leaf, crayon, pastel and pencil on paper to explore historical depictions of wings and flying, while her large-scale collages employ mapping to smartly reinterpret aesthetic and literary themes from the past.
