ART

BARRY LE VA

February 11 2016 - March 12 2016

Like many sculptors who emerged in the late sixties, this American artist took his work off the pedestal and onto the floor. In his latest piece, "Network," bulky cylinders, chevrons, and pi symbols are laid out in an almost, but not quite, symmetrical arrangement. Most of the elements are cast from the industrial material Hydrostone; aluminum rods are placed to suggest unifying connections between them. Is this an installation or a sculpture? Le Va's achievement is that he makes the question moot, creating a pleasant tension between the whole and its parts.
